Maths

English

LO: To draft a character description

Where you sat at a rectangular table used to show how important you were. The king sat at the head of the table and everyone was ranked in order below that so the idea of a round table was revolutionary with nobody sitting higher than anyone else.

Read the story again.

Who do you think will sit in one of the empty seats? Would they be a good or bad knight?

What might they be like? What personality characteristics might they have?

Create a list of possible characteristics and experiences for a good knight (include both physical and personal characteristics such as: strong, calm, kind, clever, etc). Come up with a name for the knight. Note that as legends are retold and changed, you could easily be describing a female knight.

Today, I would like you to plan your own knights character description - what characteristics does he/she have and why?

How have they proved themselves worthy of a place at the table?

This is just the planning phase. Use the character sheets from previous days to help you think of the characteristic your new knight will have.

You will be writing your character description tomorrow. I am hoping to use these for a fantastic display outside of our classroom. Please try to make sure you are using your punctuation and spelling words correctly. I am happy for you to type your planning and your final piece.

Art & DT

LO: Create and combine shapes to create recognisable forms

What is sculpture?

Do you know any famous artists that create sculptures?

Watch the following -

sculpture-arts
week.ppt

I would like you to create a sculpture today and send a photo of your design into school.

Your sculpture must be of a recognisable, famous landmark. Can you create the Eiffel Tower? How about Big Ben?

You can make your sculpture out of anything you choose. I would be extremely impressed if you made 3D shapes from nets (these can be found, if easier, ready to print on line) and then create the sculpture from your own 3D shapes.

Be as creative as you like. I look forward to seeing them 😊
